

Where Fallen Soldiers Dwell

Men and women far and wide across the USA Take an oath knowing they may give their lives away through air and sea they go to places they may not know together they fight side by side demonstrating their American pride When the battle is over and the war is won it is home many come some come home injured others come to be interred Those interred we should revere
As they are no longer here
Their names are forever carved in stone And they will never be alone they will always be remembered well for they are where the brave who gave their all dwell So to them respect we pay on this and every Memorial Day

Rose Cooper

03/05/2026